AREA DATA

Cawston is a small community in the Similkameen Valley known as the Organic Farming Capital of Canada, bordered by the town of Keremeos, which is about 6 kilometres away, and serves as the main commercial center for the area. The nearest large city is Penticton, located about 45 minutes northeast, which provides a wider range of services, shopping, and recreational opportunities. Kelowna is approximately a two-hour drive from Cawston and has an international airport and more extensive amenities.

With a long, hot growing season and dry, windy conditions, the area is ideal for sustainable agriculture. Approximately 40% of the farms here are certified organic, contributing to its reputation for high-quality produce. In addition to farming, Cawston is home to over 18 local wineries, cideries, and a craft distillery, making it a popular destination for wine enthusiasts.

Visitors to Cawston often explore its acclaimed wineries and cideries. The nearby Similkameen River is a favorite spot for fishing and tubing, providing opportunities to enjoy the natural beauty of the region. Hiking trails in the area showcase a variety of landscapes, from desert-like terrain with cacti and sagebrush to lush sub-alpine meadows. The annual Oktoberfest celebration at Crowsnest Vineyards is another highlight, bringing together locals and visitors for a festival of wine, food, and entertainment.

Cawston lies within the territory of the Smelqmix (Similkameen) Nation, specifically the Lower Similkameen Indian Band, which is part of the Syilx Nation.

RECREATION

Regardless of the season, Cawston and its neighboring towns offer a diverse range of outdoor and cultural activities, making it a year-round destination.

As the Similkameen Valley comes to life, outdoor activities in Cawston and the surrounding areas become increasingly popular. Hiking and mountain biking are ideal, with trails in the Similkameen Valley offering breathtaking views of blossoming orchards and vineyards. Birdwatching is also excellent during this time, particularly along the Similkameen River, where migratory birds return. Local wineries and cideries allow visitors to sample early releases of new wines.

The warm summer months provide prime opportunities for river activities, including tubing, kayaking, and swimming in the Similkameen River. Fishing is also popular, with opportunities to catch trout and other species. Nearby Bromley Rock Provincial Park is a favorite summer destination for picnicking, swimming, and cliff jumping. Camping is available in both Cathedral Provincial Park and the Ashnola River Valley, offering scenic wilderness experiences. Cawston's surrounding vineyards and orchards are in full swing, and fruit picking becomes a popular activity at local farms.

As temperatures cool, you can head of for a day of hiking in the Snowy Protected Area and the South Okanagan Grassland. Fall is also the peak of the wine season, with many wineries hosting harvest festivals and tasting events. Hunting season begins in the surrounding hills, with deer and game birds being common in the region.

The colder months offer cross-country skiing and snowshoeing available in nearby areas such as Nickel Plate Nordic Centre near Penticton and trails around Keremeos. For downhill skiing and snowboarding, Apex Mountain Resort, about an hour's drive from Cawston, provides excellent terrain and reliable snowfall. Wildlife viewing is another winter attraction, as bighorn sheep and other animals descend to lower elevations. The surrounding wineries continue to offer tastings, including unique ice wines, which are harvested during the coldest months.

HISTORY

Cawston is an unincorporated community in the south Similkameen Valley, named after Richard Lowe Cawston, a pioneer cattle rancher and magistrate who settled in the area in the 19th century. The region also holds historical significance as the site of a Hudson's Bay Company trading post, known as Fort Similkameen, which played a role in the fur trade during the 19th century. Today, Cawston is recognized for its organic farming practices and vibrant agricultural community.
