DESCRIPTION

This turnkey getaway spans three titles on the north side of Usk and offers a private and peaceful setting just 20 minutes from Terrace, accessed by the cable ferry over the Skeena River. The property is laid out on a south facing slope, providing excellent sun exposure for gardening, natural drainage, and elevation above the 200-year floodplain. Surrounded by beautiful mountain views, this is an ideal location for those seeking quiet country living within walking distance of the world-renowned Skeena River.

The cozy home has summer cottage vibes and features a wood stove on the main floor, a pellet stove in the basement, and supplemental electric baseboard heating. The main level includes a master bedroom with a nice view over the front of the property, while a second bedroom is located downstairs, along with a functional workshop area, laundry and deep freeze. Outside, the property is well suited for self-sufficiency, with multiple garden plots, raised beds, and a variety of established plants including blackberries, Saskatoon bushes, apple and cherry trees, currants, and natural medicinal species such as stinging nettle and devil's club. A former chicken coop/goat house currently serves as a greenhouse, and a conveniently plumbed sink is located near the garden beds.

Additional outbuildings include a large, heated workshop wired with 220-amp power, as well as a large woodshed with covered parking for the lawn tractor and ATV. A spring-fed creek runs next to the home, with a licensed water source in place. There is also an equipment list for everything that comes with the sale. This unique property combines functionality and convenience, privacy, and natural beauty in the amazing Skeena Valley.

LOCATION

2390 Usk Station Road - Usk, BC

AREA DATA

The property at 2390 Usk Station Road sits along the broad, fertile valley of the Skeena River, surrounded by forested mountains and open river flats that give the area a quiet, pastoral feel. The north side of the river is accessed by the cable ferry, which helps preserve its peaceful character and limits through traffic, creating a sense of privacy and seclusion while still being within easy reach of Terrace. The landscape is a mix of mature forest, small farms, and rural acreages, many with excellent sun exposure and expansive views across the valley and surrounding peaks.

The area is well known for its natural beauty and strong connection to the outdoors. The Skeena River, one of the most famous salmon-bearing rivers in the world, runs within a short walk from the property and offers exceptional fishing opportunities along with scenic spots for walking and wildlife viewing. The surrounding forests and backcountry provide space for hiking, foraging, and exploring, while the quiet roads and trails make it ideal for those seeking a slower pace of life.

VEGETATION

The vegetation around Usk reflects a transition between coastal rainforest influence and interior forest ecosystems, creating a rich and diverse landscape along the Skeena River valley. The area is dominated by mixed coniferous forests, with western hemlock, western red cedar, and Sitka spruce common in wetter sites, while lodgepole pine and interior spruce appear in slightly drier or more open areas. Deciduous trees such as black cottonwood, trembling aspen, and paper birch are often found along riverbanks, floodplains, and in regenerating forest stands.

The understory is lush and productive, particularly in the moist valley bottom soils. Shrubs like salmonberry, red-osier dogwood, huckleberry, and devil's club thrive here, along with ferns, mosses, and a wide variety of groundcover plants. In spring and summer, the area supports abundant wildflowers and edible plants, including berries and medicinal species such as stinging nettle. Open clearings and small agricultural areas around Usk create a patchwork of pasture, garden space, and natural vegetation, while riparian zones along creeks and the Skeena River support dense, vibrant plant growth. This combination of forest, riverbank, and open land gives the Usk area its distinctly green, fertile, and highly productive natural character.

RECREATION

The area around Usk offers outstanding outdoor recreation in every season, centered around the powerful and scenic Skeena River. Renowned worldwide, the Skeena and its tributaries provide exceptional fishing opportunities, particularly for salmon and steelhead, drawing anglers from across the globe. The river also offers opportunities for boating, wildlife viewing, and simply enjoying the dramatic valley scenery.

Beyond the river, the surrounding forests and mountains provide endless space for exploration. Logging roads and backcountry trails are ideal for hiking, ATVing, hunting, and foraging, while the area's rich ecosystems support abundant wildlife. In winter, the region transforms into a quiet, snow-covered landscape suited to snowmobiling, snowshoeing, and cross-country travel through the backcountry. Shames Mountain is a hidden gem in the skiing world, only a short drive west of Terrace it is an exciting place often with incredible snow conditions throughout winter. With its combination of world-class fishing and vast wilderness access, the area offers a true four-season outdoor lifestyle.

HISTORY

The area around Usk lies within the traditional territory of the Tsimshian First Nations, whose communities have lived along the Skeena River for thousands of years. The river was—and remains—a vital travel corridor and food source, particularly for salmon, which played a central role in culture, trade, and seasonal life. Villages, fishing sites, and trails connected communities throughout the valley long before European contact.

European influence began in the late 1800s with the arrival of traders, missionaries, and prospectors moving through the Skeena corridor. Settlement increased in the early 20th century with the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, which opened the region to transportation, logging, and small-scale agriculture. Usk developed as a modest rail-side community serving nearby farms and forestry operations, with its location along the Skeena making it a natural stopping point.

Throughout the mid-1900s, the area remained rural and resource-based, shaped by logging, rail activity, and subsistence living tied closely to the land. Today, Usk retains much of that quiet, historic character. While the railway still runs through the valley and the surrounding forests continue to support resource industries, the area is increasingly appreciated for its natural beauty, world-class fishing, and peaceful rural lifestyle along one of British Columbia's most iconic rivers.
